Of Interest to Women Readers

Attractive Women. Most parents are fond of inculcating in the minds of children the idea that beauty is undesirable, and that it is really a snare to the possessor. And yet, in spite of all this, everybody wants to be beautiful. The desire begins with life, and ends only with death-if, indeed, it ever ends. Almost the first thing the little girl will do, after she is able to run alone, will be to climb into a chair and survey herself to the looking glass.

From Lucile's Diary

Brownhurst is the little suburban town where the Nodines live. I decided to surprise them, and I went out on Thursday by the morning train. Leaving my suitcase in the station, I strolled thru the village to their pretty home in the most casual way.

"Why, Lucite," Carol-Mrs. Nodine -exclaimed when she looked up from the young carrots she was thinning and saw me standing by her side, where did you drop from?"

"From the dull and smoky town," I answered:

My glance traveled from the masses of purple and white lilac bloom that hedged in the far end of the garden to the forget-me-nots and lilies of the valley that bordered the path. "Aren't you lucky to live in this paradise?" "Yes, lucky to live and work in it,"

am very glad to share it with you for a little while, Lucile, because you do look rather pale and worn." It was snippy of Carol to welcome me with an allusion to my palior, I younger than she does, despite her vaunted country life. "As soon as my suitcase comes up from the station I'll put on my land army uniform and help you all the afternoon," I told her. "I designed my own uniform. The knickerbockers and Norfolk jacket are awfully chic." "I dare say," said Carol, "but don't get into them this afternoon, Lucile, for I shall not be working in the garden. I go to the Red Cross after lunch.

"You'll excuse me from that, won't you? That wouldn't be any change for me. I might as well be home if I'ni folding gauze. You understand how I feel, don't you?"

"Yes, perfectly, Lucile, You can rest and read while I'm at the Red Cross. Make yourself at home in every way."

"Thank you, Carol," I replied gratefully, and I did invite my soul for two hours in the afternoon. Then, becoming a bit bored, I went outdoors to find something to do. I was delighted to see in the wood lot behind the garden an enormous pile of "Just the thing," I said to myself gayly. "I'll have a lovely big bonfire, and get rid of all this heap for Carol. I lighted it immediately, for I adore the pungent odor of burning leaves. I had a rake to stir them and I had been enjoying myself hugely when I heard Carol calling me excitedly.

"How did they get on fire?" she asked breathlessly as she came running to my side.

"I lighted them. Isn't it a glorious bonfire?"

"Oh, Lucile, why did you do that?" "To burn them for you, of course." "But Tom and I were saving them | driven faster than a set rate. for compost. Rotted leaves enrich the soil wonderfully, and now they're just about all gone. Oh, dear, what will Tom say? We must put out the fire before any more of the trees are

"Injured?" I repeated. "Yes, don't you see, Lucile, that all the tender young foliage in the trees around this fire is getting frizzled and wilted? We can carry water from the pump. The garden hose won't reach

"They got lighted by-by mistake," she explained. "And look at those trees, I don't believe they will ever recover. Our efforts at scientific gardening don't seem to be highly successful," he remarked crossly. He took the pail from Carol. "Dear, you look all in. I'll finish up this fire in short order."

He scarcely greeted me at all, and neither of them appeared to notice that I was almost exhausted. It is really trying to be with people who are so selfishly wrapped up in each other as are the Nodines.

Carol went to bed immediately at ter dinner, because, as Tom explained, the smoke had burt her eyes and made her head ache. He apologized for having to devote his time to some government blue prints, and I had such a dreary evening that I decided to take the opportunity to get some extra beauty sleep, and went to bed myself before 10.

When I found the next morning that Tom had gone to the city and Carol was still in her room with her headache, I hastily gathered a charming big bunch of lilacs, and leaving a note for her, I took the mid-morning train for home. I felt that Carol had not made the effort to get up and entertain me that a guest might properly expect. I have always thought that she babies herself unnecessarily.

FIRST SILVER WEDDING WAS ARRANGED IN 987

Plans Laid by Hugues Capet, Then King of France Followed Since.

The fashion of silver weddings dates back to the reign of Hugues capet, king of France in 987. Oace as Hu gues was arranging his uncle's affairs he found on one of the estates a servant who had grown gray in the service of his relative. On the farm with this old man was also a serving woman who was as old as he and also unmarried, who had been the most devoted and hard working of the women servants of the king's micle. When the king heard these praises of the two he ordered them brought before him and said to the woman:

"Your service is great, greater than grown-ups. this man's, whose services were great enough, for the woman always finds work and obedience harder than a man, and therefore I will give you a reward. At your age I know of none better than a dowry and a husband. The dowry is here-this farm from this time forth belongs to you. If this man who has worked with you five and twenty years is willing to marry you then the busband is ready." INTERESTING NEW INVENTIONS Indiana Man Patents Pie Crust Mak ing Device.

An Elkhart, Indiana man has obtained a patent on a device for forming crusts for pastries and any other form of edible that is cooked and served in crusts. Instead of a ple being baked in one large pan and then cut up for serving, each pie is baked in a separate crust. The crusts are made on aluminum forms. He has perfected not only a machine to make the forms, but a machine to spread the dough over the forms and a method for hanging the forms in an ordinary gas oven so that several dozen of them can be baked at the same time. One machine will make 100 crusts a minute.
